

PSG ADVENTURE

The peaks of the Tatras, foamy waters of the Dunajec and picturesque valleys and their looming castles can all be explored in the Prešov region without limits and with just the right amount of adrenaline and adventure in your blood, in the air, on the ground, through the water and head first freefalling from a height of 70 m.

PREŠOV AUTONOMOUS REGION – A PLACE FOR ADVENTURE

The less brave or more homely among us tend to say that adventure is the result of bad planning, while those who actively seek adventure are in constant search of challenges and crave to time and again test and stretch the limits of what is possible yet know that a step too far could be the last.

Ski mountaineering

Ideal conditions for this demanding sport, which requires fantastic physical condition, can be found mostly in The High Tatras. In the area of the national park, ski mountaineering is allowed between 21st December and 15th April only for individuals who are members of a mountaineering association and have a valid ID. Authorised trails have different ratings.

Paragliding and parachuting

“Frater Cyprian attached a devil’s machine to himself on top of the Three Crowns and with its help he flew over to the Morské oko lake”, a certain professor from Rimavská Sobota says in an archival Latin document from 1760. Whether the most famous friar from Červený Kláštor really could fly has been keeping the historians and technicians interested until today. But the truth is that the story about a flying monk is the first reference to flying in Slovakia and conceals people’s eternal desire to fly. Whilst paragliding you can admire the beautiful valleys, castles and monuments of the Prešov region with a bird’s-eye view.

Paragliding, The High Tatras

There are four locations with allocated times available for paragliding in the area of High Tatras National Park. The National Park management has to be notified about the flight and a planned location in advance.
